INTRODUCTION

MY DEAR FRIENDS :

That includes every one that are in any way interested in Pheasants, Poultry or their eggs, or contemplate the purchase of same. Do not put this little booklet aside until after you have gone over every page carefully, and compared prices and stock. It will save you money to do so, and start you with the right kind of stock. The prices are based on the "Live and let Live" principal. It has been my aim to furnish the very best stock obtainable at the lowest possible prices. If you buy stock or eggs for less than quoted in following pages you run a risk. Investigate, compare prices and stock before you buy, and it will pay you. A small trial order will convince you.

Yours for success,

J. G. GREEN, JR.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The bearer, Mr. J. G. Green, Jr., a resident of this place, and a breeder and importer of pheasants, ducks and poultry, is a man of good character and reputation, financially responsible, and any business dealings entered into will be faithfully fulfilled.

C. M. YOUNG, Cashier.

A WORD ABOUT PHEASANTS

Pheasants are without doubt the most beautiful bird in the world. They are not an expensive bird to keep or raise. They require less feed than pigeons, less room than chickens, are more hardy, and will stand any kind of clime. An expensive house is unnecessary, a large size store box with aviaries made of wire netting size about fifteen feet long by six or ten feet wide and four feet high will accommodate four hens and a cock comfortable.

Pheasant breeding is no longer an experiment, but is as practical as the raising of any other FANCY fowl, and a true fancier is not content until his collection comprises a number of varieties.

The most common to be seen in this country are the Golden, Silver, English Ring-neck, the Reeves and Lady Amherst. The two latter varieties are yet quite rare, but the prices we quote on the above are within reach of all, being one-half what the same birds were sold for three years ago. Some of the other varieties quoted on the following pages are very beautiful and extremely rare specimens, making them very high in price.

OUR TERMS

Cash must in all cases accompany the order. We will not ship stock C. O. D., but guarantee satisfaction, and if not as represented we will return all the money less express charges.

GOLDEN PHEASANTS

KING OF THE PHEASANT FAMILY

I have not the time or space to give a description of all the different varieties of pheasants. I will give a short sketch of a few varieties obtainable at a moderate price.

To give a complete description of the Golden Pheasant would fill more than three books of this size. This is one of the most beautiful birds in the world. The cock is very proud, having a golden silken crest covering the top of his head, a square tipped ruff rich orange barred with purple, which he can make into a beautiful fan shape at will. The cheeks and throat are buff, the upper parts of back a deep metallic green, and saddle golden yellow fringed with red at the sides, the shoulders, breast and flank being scarlet.

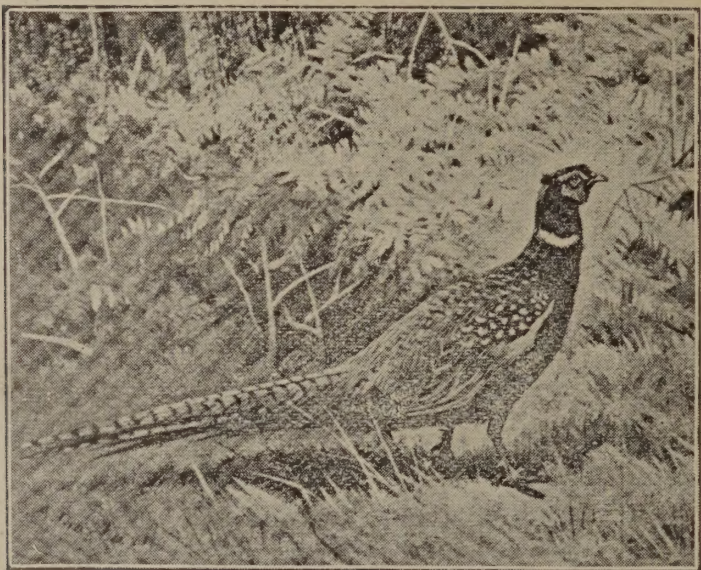

For prices see page 12.

SILVER PHEASANTS

This bird is becoming very popular through the United States. They are a large bird, very hardy, of a gentle disposition and excellent breeders in captivity. The cocks tail reaches two feet in length. In color he is purple black in the crest and breast, the upper plumage and tail are delicately marked with black lines, the face covered with brilliant red wattles. On the whole he is a very beautiful bird to behold.

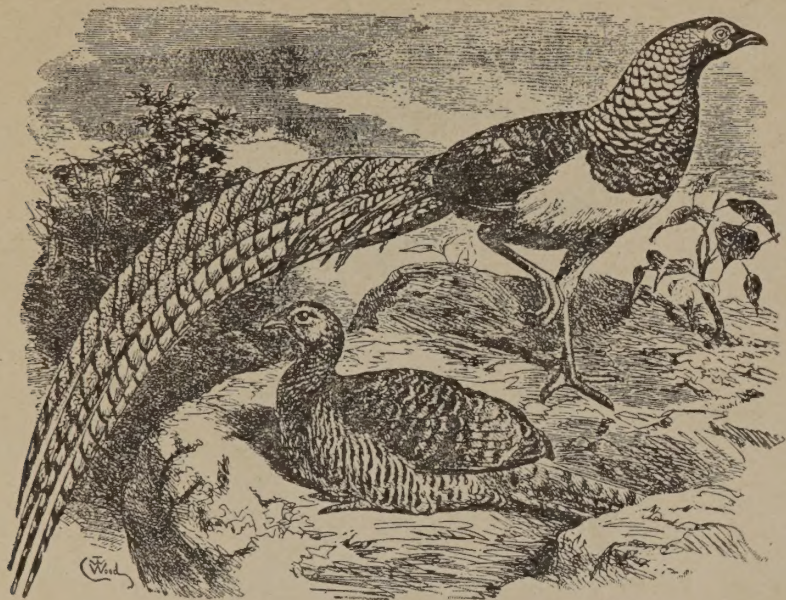

For prices see page 12 .

ENGLISH RING-NECK PHEASANTS

No doubt this bird is to be found throughout this country in the hands of fanciers and breeders more than any other variety of pheasants. This is possibly due to the low price they may be obtained for, or that they are excellent breeders and multiply fast. They are excellent breeders in captivity, laying 60 to 70 eggs in a season. This bird is too well known to need description. We can furnish their eggs by the dozen, hundred or thousand, also the English Black-neck, which is of the same family and differ only in color of neck. If you are in position to use eggs by the hundred or thousand lots will quote prices. Can also furnish several thousand young birds in autumn at low figures if order is received in time.

For prices see page 12.

LADY AMHERST PHEASANTS

The Amherst, like the Golden, are a native of China. The first known pair was presented to Lady Amherst in 1828, whence it received their name. It is a favorite in the Zoological gardens and for aviaries. It is larger than the Golden, with very striking plumage, showing fourteen different brilliant colors. The cock is very proud, and displays its plumage in the same manner as the Golden. To cross the Amherst with the Golden makes a very beautiful hybrid. The eggs are comparatively fertile, and the chicks are extremely strong and hardy.

For prices see page 12.

REEVES PHEASANTS

The Reeves Pheasant is a very large bird, as large as the lighter breeds of poultry, the cocks tail reaching two yards in length. Plumage pure golden laced with black. The hen is also very beautiful, mottled with two shades of brown. This bird is coming to be a great game bird, and are raised by the hundred on the large English game preserves. Any one having the room can do well with these noble birds.

For prices see page 12.

SHIPPING STOCK AND EGGS

All stock and eggs are packed in such a manner that distance is no obstacle. We have never had a single complaint of injured birds or broken eggs, but on the other hand we have many letters of comment. Birds are shipped in padded coop, and each egg is wrapped and packed in a strong box, and can be shipped any distance with perfect safety. Have shipped safely to California.

SACRAMENTO, California.

OHIO PHEASANTRY, Columbiana, O.

Gentlemen :—The pair of Silver Pheasants made a quick and safe journey. It would be impossible for them to injure their self in the coop they were shipped in. I will order some eggs from you in the spring.

LAWRENCEBURG, Indiana.

MR. J. G. GREEN, JR., Columbiana, O.

Dear Sir :—I wish to advise you that the trio of Golden Pheasants arrived O. K. I am well pleased with them, the cock especially is a fine fellow. I have some nice Ring-neck cocks and no hens to mate them. Please let me know price of four or five Ring-neck hens, also Reeves and Amherst eggs. Yours truly, DR. E. J. EMMERT.

 SPECIAL NOTICE

I wish to impress on the public at large the values of the stock quoted on the following pages. The value far exceeds the prices. Prices quoted on Pheasants are for A No. 1 breeding stock. All the poultry quoted are standard bred stock, true to name, shape and color, and of the best strains in the world. If you wish a certain cock or cockerel, hen or pullet to mate with something you have, write us full particulars what you want or what you want to mate to, and we will fix you up and give you estimate. Please enclose stamp for enquiries, as we get hundreds of letters and could not afford to pay postage for the benefit of others.

For prices see pages 12 and 15.

 REFERENCE

Any one wishing reference as to my standing, honesty and ability, I respectfully refer them to The First National Bank ; Mr. Samuel Tidd, Mayor of the city, or any business man or express agent of this place.

ABOUT PHEASANT BREEDING

Pheasants will very rarely hatch and rear young when in confinement. They must be hatched and reared with chickens or in incubators. The closer you have your breeding birds to natural conditions the more fertile eggs you will get. Pheasants in small enclosures will yield on an average of fifty to sixty per cent. fertile eggs. As every one knows a wild bird at liberty very seldom produce unfertile eggs. They will produce on an average of 98 to 100 per cent. fertile eggs. Our Pheasant eggs for hatching are strictly fresh, as our breeding stock are kept on large estates being surrounded by natural conditions, and will produce 90 to 95 per cent. fertile eggs. It is profitable to pay a little more for fertile eggs. It takes 22 to 25 days for Pheasant eggs to hatch, and it does not pay to set unfertile eggs, for there is too much time and money at stake.

WELL KNOWN

I do not think it necessary to give a description of the Poultry and Bantams as listed on pages 16 and 17, as they are all well known and well established breeds throughout the country. I wish to say that all the stock used for breeding purposes are bred strictly up to "The Standard of Perfection," among which are many high scoring birds and first prize winners.

PHEASANT EGGS

As a rule five to seven Pheasant eggs are considered a setting. When buying eggs by the setting be sure the number of eggs per setting are stated. We will only have for sale a limited number of some of the varieties mentioned below. All orders are booked and filled in rotation, therefore it is advisable to get your orders in early, as first come first served.

Caponize Your Cockerels.

You can double your profit by caponizing your chicks. The operation is very simple. With each caponizing set we give free book, "Complete Guide for Caponizing." The instructions are so full and explicit that any man, woman or child, after carefully reading can successfully perform the operation. The object of caponizing is to rush the growth and weight of the fowl, causing them to grow as large as turkeys, weighing 12 to 15 pounds, the price per pound being double that of the ordinary chick. If you buy Pilling's products you get the best on the market. We sell them at a discount and pre-pay all charges.

Our price, complete with instructions, $2.25.

In velvet lined case as per engraving, $2.50.

Regular price, $2.50 and $2.75.
